Employees at Oliver Valves celebrate their long service

Employees clock up total of 220 years

KNUTSFORD-based manufacturing firm Oliver Valves has celebrated 16 employees achieving a total of 220 years' work for the company.

The employees hold a range of positions in the company including assemblers, a project sales manager, a regional sales manager and an engineering director.

Neil Barnett, 44, and 43-year-old Nick Upton, 43, both from Northwich, are the longest-standing employees at Oliver Valves, and have been at the business for 25 and 26 years respectively.

Neil and Nick started at Oliver Valves as assemblers, and Neil is now project sales manager and Nick a skilled inspector.

Michael Oliver, the chairman of Oliver Valves, celebrated the employees' achievements at a lunch held in their honour.

He said: "The people at Oliver Valves are central to the success of the business.

"The dedication of Neil and Nick is exemplary, and we hope they spend many more successful years in the company."
